I. Youth and Alumni

Continuing from 2013, IFCA maintained its foster care alumni teams in Japan and the US. In 2014, the "Youth and Alumni Project" conducted three major programs: 1) the Japan team's event on youth rights in Tokyo; 2) the Japan team's trip to the US in June; and 3) the US team's trip to Japan in September.

- 1) With guest and alumni member speeches, alumni and an adult discussion panel and the US Alumni Team's video on youth rights and youth voice, the event on 4/20/2014 drew many foster care alumni and caregiving and child welfare professional audiences at the Nippon Foundation building.
- 2) During the 10 day trip to the state of Washington in June, the 5-member Japan Alumni Team, the US and Japan teams collaborated on the fist "Youth Summit in Seattle" and a * Strategic Sharing Workshop. The Japan team had site visits at 5 youth service organization where they learned about the delivery of independent living programs and services to area foster youth and alumni. They observed a dependency court proceeding and a Q & A session with a volunteer court-appointed special advocate [CASA], and participated in roundtable discussions with Mockingbird Youth Network youth leaders and a youth rights specialist attorney. During the 2-night retreat in Mount Baker, the US and the Japan alumni members set their own vision and goals for the future together. *Strategic Sharing is a method that teaches foster children to tell their foster care stories in a safe and effective way.
- 3) During the 14-day September trip, the 4-member US team visited 8 facilities in 4 major Japanese cities [Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya and Kobel, held 2 youth summits, one Strategic Sharing workshop and one press conference, spoke at a world-wide child abuse scholastic convention [ISPCAN] and played a leadership role at a world youth conference. In addition, the team connected with foster youth and alumni of care, foster parents, facility workers, community organizers and policy makers.

From the youth's own verbal reports at the overseas travel reporting events in Tokyo and Seattle, and from their essays, the 2014 activities contributed greatly to their personal growth and to the closeness between the two international teams. The two teams' members worked diligently to build foundations for the IFCA Alumni Project's core programs such as the youth blog and the Strategic Sharing Program. Team members felt that they were able to use their own voices to raise awareness about foster care in each other's country and that they made progress in working towards their own mission—"Through collaboration, young people unite to improve child welfare at a global level."

II. Caregivers

Continued from 2013, IFCA maintained its relationship with the Mockingbird Family Model-Japan [MFM-]]. Through this collaboration, the Mockingbird Family Model Manual [Book 2.] was translated into Japanese. Core members from MFM-I and IFCA are currently in the process of forming a committee to build the first Mockingbird Family Model pilot project in Japan.

III. Child Welfare Professionals

In September, Miyako Shirakawa, M.D. [IFCA's clinical director] and Monica Fitzgerald, Ph.D. [University of Colorado/Kempe Center] along with the IFCA's selected US and Japan alumni members presented in a workshop at the ISPCAN [International Society for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect] in Nagoya. Also in September, Dr. Fitzgerald provided her fourth 3-day TF-CBT [Trauma-Focused Cognitive Behavioral Therapy] workshop in Tokyo and 43 pre-selected clinicians who are actively working with trauma victim children participated in this workshop. Her students from this Tokyo workshop have already started receiving on-line TF-CBT case consultations.
